Telephonebooth is proud to bring to Kansas City the 7th appearance of Sean Semones recent endeavors since his first body work shown at the gallery in 2003.

Sean is a 2002 graduate of the Kansas City Art Institute Printmaking Dept, currently working on his M.L.S. in St. Louis.

Over the past 15 years Sean has been included in numerous shows around Kansas City including the MOMO gallery, Leedy Voulkos, Urban Culture Project, Paragraph and H.R. Block Artspace.

While Sean went thru a technical program at art school he has always had a painterly process and consistently followed that process as a method of working thru content. While his statements are often poetic and abstract there is a poetics to his work based on color, form, line and the narrative questions of his daily life.

A recent quote from Sean helps explain this process and content:

“These recent mixed media paintings are often created in clusters so that parts are shared with other paintings. Two or more works may begin together, sharing common elements or arrangements, and from there gradually differentiate from each other. Or, works begun at different points in time through the process of drawing, collaging and painting, may come to share resemblances to each other. When shown together the works begin to converse with each other: sometimes mirroring or complimenting other works or sometimes contrasting with the others.”
